

TO REBUILD THE SILVER MINTS IN MEXICO

Nogales, Ariz., July 14.—The chamber of commerce has joined with Charles S. Butler, mining expert of New York and San Francisco, to promote the formation in Mexico of an association of silver mine owners and silver producers to rebuild the abandoned mints throughout the nation at a cost of about one million dollars. Mr. Butler states that if the old time minting plan is re-established it will mean that Mexico will coin 500,000,000 pesos of silver.

The mining expert has extensive experience in Mexico, Salvador and Nicaragua and is known for his introduction of the cyanide reduction process into Mexico. He says the greatest need of Mexico today is small change and hard money.

The revolution and the world war, says Mr. Butler, have stripped Mexico bare of silver coin. In its place he says is a vast quantity of paper money issued by the varying governments as fiat money. He blames the great flood of paper money in Mexico for most of the suffering in that nation in connection with the various revolutions.

This system, according to the silver mine expert, has threefold benefits. It will, he says, at once restore to Mexico the "hard money" and small change, provide a permanent primary market at home for large amounts of silver production and stabilize the silver market because the Mexican home requirements will take up a great quantity of silver now expected and sold on a speculative market through San Francisco for the Orient.

President Bracey Curtis of the chamber of commerce has named a committee of prominent men to take up the mint proposal with General Alvaro Obregon on his impending visit to his home in Nogales, Sonora, this month.

Meanwhile the proposition will be submitted by the Nogales Chamber of Commerce to the civic bodies of all other border cities and the officials of border states.

Loe Choo Islands.

Along busy highways of each island, land links between Japan and Pormosa, not far from China's coastwise routes, yet visited by only two or three white persons a year—such are the Loe Choo (Lochoo or Ryukyu) Islands.

"Loe Choo is a land full of the indescribable charm and mystery of the Orient, but repels with the pathos of a vanishing race," writes Roy Chapman Andrews to the National Geographic society.

"But, although it has been 40 years since there sounded the death knell of this little hidden kingdom, Loe Choo is not yet

Japan. The traveler realizes this even before he lands. The pine-clad, tomb-dotted hills which form the background of the strange little cities of Naha and Shuri have an unfamiliar look and the pretty tiled roofs of the diminutive houses, just visible over the surrounding gray stone walls, give fascinating hints of what may be found beyond their lacquered gateways. On their entire 300 square miles of land only one white man—an American missionary—is resident.

"With our money changed we began to look about to spend it, for Loe Choo is the home of the red lacquer ware famous throughout the world. Much of it is imported, and the finest of the boxes, bowls, trays, tables, etc., which are in daily use in Japan and China and sold to tourists throughout the Orient, come from the little city of Naha, or Shuri, its neighbor across the hills. The lacquer ware, when first made, is a dull brown, but really first class pieces improve with age and soon change to a beautiful vermilion, becoming brighter and clearer the longer they are used.

"When we came to buy lacquer we were greatly surprised to find that bargaining had no place in Loe Choo. Without exception, the first price asked for an article was the one for which it was sold. Never in the Orient had we met with a similar condition.

"It was interesting to find, also, that the women of Loe Choo conduct all business and have charge of everything pertaining to money—with the single slight exception of spending it. The market, where in the morning trading for vegetables and fruit is carried on, resembles a bazaar meeting place, for among the crowded mass of humanity not a man is to be seen.

"The straight backs and erect carriage of the Loe Choo women are due to the custom of carrying everything upon their heads. No matter what the object, be it large or small, it is perched upon their thick black hair, and off they walk in the most nonchalant manner, apparently paying not the slightest attention to keeping the object in place.

"The most striking thing about Naha and Shuri are the high stone walls which surround the houses. These walls are generally covered by a small banyan tree, called the goja maru, growing in a great vine and sending out numberless roots which sometimes reach a hundred feet from the original stem.

"These also serve as a hiding place for a snake, a kind of adder, six or seven feet long, which is the cause of the ill-anda. Their bite is generally fatal in a few hours, and many people are killed by them each year."

WOODSTOCK

The second union service of all the churches of Woodstock was held at West Woodstock Sunday evening, the church being filled. The East Woodstock orchestra played a few selections; Arthur Pilling of Quinebaug sang a solo. Rev. Ezra B. Pike led in prayer. The speaker of the evening was Rev. C. C. S. MacKay of Guilford, who delivered a forceful address on "The Problem of the Races." He showed the great menace threatening America, the solution of which lies with the church.
